1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Plaintiffs John Doe, David Gudeman, and Paola Correa (“Plaintiffs”) and defendants 3 Google Inc. and Alphabet, Inc. (collectively “Google”) seek the Court’s approval, pursuant to 4 Labor Code section 2699(1), of a settlement of Plaintiffs’ claims under the Labor Code Private 5 Attorneys General Act (“PAGA”), arising from Google’s use of an “Adult Content Liability 6 Release.” For the reasons explained below, the parties respectfully request that the Court approve 7 the settlement.

8 II. FACTS & PROCEDURAL HISTORY

9 A. The Liability Release

10 On February 14, 2017, Plaintiffs Doe, Gudeman, and Correa filed a notice with the Labor 11 Workforce and Development Agency (“LWDA”) contending that Google’s Adult Content 12 Liability Release (“Liability Release”) violated California Labor Code §§ 232.5 and 432.5.
13 (Baker Decl. ¶ 2; Ex. 1). The Liability Release stated in full:

14 Confidential: For Google Employees and Temporary Workers on 15 Assignment at Google Only

16 During my employment or assignment at Google, I may be exposed 17 to sensitive “adult content”, such as text, descriptions, graphics, 18 pictures, and/or other files commonly referred to as being “adult” content.

19 I acknowledge that exposure to this material may be a part of my 20 essential job function and hereby release Google Inc. and its 21 subsidiaries and affiliates from any and all liability associated with 22 having this material present in the work environment, including but 23 not limited to claims of harassment, hostile work environment and discrimination. This agreement does not change or impact the atwill status of my employment or my assignment at Google.

24 (Baker Decl. ¶ 2; Ex. 1 (Ex. 1)).

25 Plaintiffs argued that the Liability Release violated Labor Code § 232.5(a) and (b) because 26 the Release was “confidential” and section 232.5(a) and (b) makes it unlawful for an employer to 27 prohibit employees from “disclosing information about the employer’s working conditions.”

28 Plaintiffs also argued that the Liability Release violated Labor Code § 432.5 because it

1 required the release of unwaivable statutory claims under FEHA, Title VII, and other laws.
2 Section 432.5 states that no employer “shall require any employee or applicant for employment to 3 agree, in writing, to any term or condition which is known by such employer . . . to be prohibited 4 by law.”

5 Google disputed the claims and contended that the “release” appropriately apprised 6 employees and contingent workers assigned through Adecco that their essential job functions may 7 include exposure to “adult content.” Google further contended that: (1) the claims were not 8 properly the subject of a representative action; (2) it “cured” any alleged violation of Labor Code 9 section 232.5 (as described below); and (3) even if Plaintiff prevailed, any penalties awarded 10 would be substantially reduced. Section 2699(e)(2) states that “a court may award a lesser 11 amount than the maximum civil penalty amount specified by this part if, based on the facts and 12 circumstances of the particular case, to do otherwise would result in an award that is unjust, 13 arbitrary and oppressive, or confiscatory.” See Thurman v. Bayshore Transit Mgmt. (2012) 203 14 Cal.App.4th 1112, 1136 (“[T]he trial court reasonably determined that an award of the maximum 15 penalty amount would be unjust under the facts and circumstances of this case.”).

16 B. The New Policy, the Cure Dispute, and the Third Amended Complaint

17 On March 17, 2017, Google, without conceding liability or fault, notified the LWDA that, 18 “pursuant to Labor Code section 2699.3(c)(2)(A),<sup>1</sup> Google has elected to effectuate a ‘cure’ of the 19 alleged violation in treating the [Liability Release] as confidential, by notifying employees that 20 the [Liability Release] has been rescinded, will not be enforced, and will not be treated as 21 confidential.” (Baker Decl. ¶ 3; Ex. 2.) In place of the Liability Release, Google instituted the 22 following policy:
23

26 <sup>1</sup> Because Labor Code § 232.5(a) or (b) is not listed in Labor Code § 2699.5, a violation of these 27 provisions may be “cured” under certain circumstances. See Labor Code § 2699.3(c). Unless 28 an aggrieved employee contests the cure, he or she may be prohibited from bringing suit. If the LWDA expressly accepts the cure, an aggrieved employee cannot file suit, but must instead appeal the LWDA’s decision. Labor Code § 2699.3(c)(3).

1 All US Googlers and temporary workers are covered under this 2 policy and if you previously signed our “Employee and Temporary 3 Workers Adult Content Liability Release,” that document is 4 rescinded and will not be enforced.

5 In addition, please be aware that neither this new policy, nor the 6 “Employee and Temporary Worker Adult Content Liability 7 Release” is or will be treated as “Confidential” material.

8 Depending on your role at Google, it is possible that you could be 9 exposed to sensitive “adult content” or graphic or disturbing 10 material that has been generated by Users, in the course of 11 performing your regular job duties. For example, you might be 12 exposed to such material as part of processing or investigating take-13 down or removal requests. Such content might include text 14 descriptions, graphics, photographs, videos and/or other types of 15 files or media containing concepts or images of a sexual and/or 16 violent in nature.

17 All Googlers and temporary workers assigned to work at Google 18 are expected to bring to Google’s attention right away any graphic 19 or disturbing material that causes concern or distress. If a Googler 20 or temporary worker no longer wishes to continue being placed in a 21 position that exposes him/her to such material, he/she should 22 inform Human Resources right away. Note, however, that Google 23 may not be able to limit exposure to such material to the extent that 24 such exposure is required by that individual’s job responsibilities.

25 This policy is not intended to alter or detract in any way from 26 Google’s policies prohibiting unlawful harassment. Google’s 27 policies prohibiting harassment remain in effect at all times, and 28 any employee who engages in harassment or offensive conduct that violates applicable law and/or Google policy will be subject to discipline up to and including termination.

(Baker Decl. ¶ 3; Ex. 2 (Exs. C and D)).

On March 27, 2017, Plaintiffs contested Google’s cure effort. They argued that the cure was insufficient because Google failed to advise its former employees, as well as those working outside of California, that the Liability Release was not confidential. (Baker Decl. ¶ 4). Google responded to Plaintiffs’ arguments. (Baker Decl. ¶ 4). The LWDA expressed no position on the matter. (Baker Decl. ¶ 4). Accordingly, on April 28, 2018, upon expiration of the relevant administration exhaustion periods, Plaintiffs filed a Third Amended Complaint (3AC) alleging that the Liability Release violated Labor Code §§ 232.5 and 432.5. (See 3AC ¶¶ 90-94, 160, 167).

1 If the parties had not resolved these claims, Google contends that it would have moved for 2 summary adjudication on the issue.

3 C. Relevant Motion Practice

4 In May 2017, Google filed a demurrer to the 3AC. It argued, among other things, that 5 Plaintiffs' claim against Google under Labor Code § 232.5 as to the Liability Release was 6 preempted by Garmon and Plaintiff's claim against Google under Labor Code § 432.5 as to the 7 Liability Release was impermissibly vague and uncertain. On June 27, 2017, the Court sustained 8 Google's demurrer to the Labor Code § 232.5 claim, but overruled Google's demurrer as to the 9 uncertainty of the Liability Release claim under Labor Code § 432.5.

10 In August 2017, co-defendant Adecco filed its own demurrer to Plaintiffs' 3AC. In 11 addition to arguing Garmon preemption, Adecco also argued that the applicable limitations period 12 under Labor Code § 432.5 was one year.<sup>2</sup> Plaintiffs' argue to the contrary. The Court ruled that a 13 one-year limitations period applies:

14 The parties agree that the statute of limitations for a PAGA claim is 15 one year, and that the statute begins to run when the agreement is 16 executed.

17 Plaintiffs contend that because the releases that Correa was required 18 to sign "never went away" and continued throughout her 19 employment without being rescinded and without her obligations under the releases being released, liability existed for each new pay period.

20 But the cause of action here accrues when the employer "require[s] 21 any employee . . . to agree, in writing, to any term or condition 22 which is known . . . to be prohibited by law." Lab. Code § 432.5.
23 Correa executed the Social Event and GBike releases once, in 2015.
24 There is no allegation or inference that Correa signed any releases or agreements (with Google or Adecco) after this event. This cause of action as to Adecco is time-barred.

(September 14, 2017 Order (references to briefs omitted)).

25 On October 4, 2017, in response to discovery, Google produced an agreement dated July 26

27 <sup>2</sup> Adecco made the limitations period argument in the context of challenging Correa's § 432.5 28 claims as to the GBike and Social Events Releases. The Court's reasoning, however, applies with equal force to the Liability Release claim.

1 7, 2016, signed by Correa that included the Liability Release language. (Baker Decl. ¶ 5; Ex. 3.) 2 This agreement was signed within the limitations period.

3 On November 30, 2017, Google moved for judgment on the pleadings with respect to 4 Plaintiffs' Liability Release claim, and Plaintiffs moved to compel a response to an RFP 5 concerning the Liability Release claim. On December 26, 2017, the Court overruled Google's 6 motion for judgment on the pleadings and granted Plaintiffs' motion to compel discovery.

7 III. THE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

8 After the above events, Google and Plaintiffs agreed to mediate this matter. As a result of 9 this mediation, on March 22, 2018, they reached a Memorandum of Agreement as to the Liability 10 Release claims.<sup>3</sup> Google and Plaintiffs subsequently entered into the long form settlement 11 agreement presently before the Court. (Baker Decl. ¶ 6; Ex. 4). The material terms of this 12 Agreement (for purposes of this motion) are as follows:

13 A. The Payment

14 Google will pay a total of $1,048,843.00 into a common fund to resolve the PAGA 15 Liability Release claims identified in the Agreement. This settlement amount covers civil 16 penalties (to be shared between the LWDA and aggrieved employees), as well as incentive 17 payments, attorneys' fees, and litigation and settlement administration costs. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § 18 III.C through I)). The LWDA will receive 75% of the "net" settlement amount (after fees, costs, 19 and incentive payments are deducted). The aggrieved employees will receive 25% of the net 20 settlement amount on a pro-rated basis. Each aggrieved employee covered by the release will 21 receive the same amount. Each employee will also receive a notice explaining the payment.

22 B. Attorneys' Fees, Costs, Etc.

23 The Agreement permits Plaintiffs to apply for incentive payments of $1,000 each, 24 attorneys' fees not to exceed 33% of the common fund, and actual litigation costs not to exceed

26
27 28 <sup>3</sup> The parties also reached settlement of a "medical release" claim alleged in the Cassel v. Google case pending in Santa Clara Superior Court. This settlement will presented to the Cassel court.

1 $25,000.<sup>4</sup> Absent something unanticipated, the settlement administration costs are estimated to 2 be no more than $23,000. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § III.D, E, H)).

3 C. The Released Claims

4 In exchange for the Settlement Amount, the State and the identified aggrieved employees 5 will release specified PAGA claims arising from the Liability Release. The aggrieved employees 6 covered by the release are Google and Alphabet employees who signed any version of the 7 Liability Release between February 14, 2016 and the present.<sup>5</sup> The aggrieved employees also 8 include Adecco employees assigned to work at Google who signed any version of the Liability 9 Release from February 14, 2016 to the present. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § I.E, I.O)). There are 10 approximately 10,603 aggrieved employees covered by the release. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § III.B)).

11 D. Exclusions from the Release

12 The Agreement expressly does not release PAGA claims arising from the Liability 13 Release of those temporary employees who worked at Google through staffing firms other than 14 Adecco. (Ex. 4 (Agreement §§ I.K, I.R, III.R.1)). The Agreement expressly does not release 15 PAGA claims arising from the Liability Release that Adecco employees who worked at Google 16 may have against Adecco. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § I.K, I.R, III.R.1)).

17 E. Administration Process

18 The Agreement provides for a settlement administrator to distribute the common fund in 19 accordance with a specified schedule. In distributing the settlement checks to the aggrieved 20 employees, the settlement administrator will also provide a notice explaining the payment and the 21 case. (Ex. 4 (Agreement § III.M)).

22 IV. ARGUMENT

23 A. Standard of Review

24 Labor Code § 2699(1)(2) states that “the superior court shall review and approve any 25

26 <sup>4</sup> Plaintiffs have filed a separation motion in support of their application for fees, costs, and 27 incentive payments.

28 <sup>5</sup> Because Google rescinded and replaced the Liability Release on March 16, 2017, the applicable time frame as a practical matter is from February 14, 2016 to March 16, 2017 – 13 months.

1 settlement of any civil action filed pursuant to this part.” Unfortunately, PAGA does not specify 2 a standard of review for PAGA settlements, and there is no published appellate authority on the 3 subject.

4 Existing law does, however, provide some guidance as to the appropriate standard of 5 review. Plaintiffs contend, and for purposes of this motion Google does not contest, that the 6 Court should look to: (1) the standard of review used in analogous statutory schemes; (2) Federal 7 court decisions approving PAGA settlements; and (3) the purposes and policies of PAGA.

8 I. Analogous Statutory Schemes

9 A PAGA case is in the nature of a qui tam proceeding. Iskanian v. CLS Transp. Los 10 Angeles LLC (2014) 59 Cal.4th 348, 394. California has at least two other statutory schemes 11 whereby an individual may sue on behalf of the State or in the public interest: The California 12 False Claims Act and Proposition 65.<sup>6</sup> Under both schemes, a court must approve a settlement or 13 dismissal of the action.

14 Under the California False Claims Act, a qui tam plaintiff may only dismiss the case with 15 a court’s (and the government’s) consent. Gov’t Code § 12652(c)(1). In deciding whether to 16 give consent, a court must take into account “the best interests of the parties involved and the 17 public purposes behind the act.” Id. Moreover, if a qui tam plaintiff objects to a settlement 18 between the government and a defendant, the court can only approve the settlement after finding 19 it is “fair, adequate, and reasonable under all the circumstances.” Gov’t Code § 12652(e)(2)(B).

20 Similarly, Proposition 65 actions, like PAGA actions, are brought by private plaintiffs to 21 safeguard public rights. Consumer Advocacy Group, Inc. v. Kintetsu Enterprises of America

24
25 <sup>6</sup> A third statute, the Insurance Frauds Prevention Act (“IFPA”), also empowers “interested 26 persons” to bring claims on behalf of the State to combat insurance fraud. Cal. Ins. Code § 27 1871.7. This statute sets forth a complicated formula for distributing settlement proceeds while 28 also stating that the relator shall receive an amount that the court decides is “reasonable” for collecting civil penalties and damages, and that the court may allocate funds pursuant to a settlement agreement when it is in “the interests of justice.” Cal. Ins. Code § 1871.7(g).

1 (2006) 141 Cal.App.4th 46, 63. In addition to complying with specified statutory criteria,<sup>7</sup> Prop 2 65 settlements may only be approved if: (1) they are “just” and (2) they “serve the public 3 interest.” Id. at 61-62. In making this determination, the Kintetsu court described the appropriate 4 inquiry as similar to the “fair, reasonable, and adequate” test used in class actions. Id. at 61. The 5 Kintetsu court also stated that, in determining whether to approve a Prop 65 settlement, a court 6 should consider the policies underlying the statute. Id. at 63.

7                   2.       Federal Cases

8                   In addition to analogous California law, several federal district court cases have also 9 enunciated a standard for reviewing PAGA actions in the context of larger class action 10 settlements.

11                   In O’Connor v. Uber Technologies (N.D. Cal. 2016) 201 F.Supp.3d 1110, the district 12 court denied a class settlement that included PAGA claims because the PAGA portion of the 13 settlement was not “fair and adequate in view of the purposes and policies of the statute.” Id. at 14 1135. Following O’Connor, other federal courts have concluded that a PAGA settlement should 15 only be approved when it is “genuine and meaningful, [and] consistent with the underlying 16 purpose of the statute to benefit the public.” Viceral v. Minstras Group, Inc. (N.D.Cal. Oct. 11, 17 2016) 2016 WL 5907869 * 9. See, also, Ferreri v. Bask Technology, Inc. (S.D. Cal Nov. 21, 18 2016) 2016 WL 6833927, * 5 (evaluating PAGA settlement in light of purposes and policies of 19 PAGA).

20                   3.       The Purposes and Policies of PAGA<sup>8</sup>

21                   PAGA was passed because the Legislature believed it necessary “to achieve maximum 22 compliance with state labor laws” and “to ensure an effective disincentive for employers to 23 engage in unlawful and anticompetitive business practices.” 2003 Cal. Legis. Serv. Ch. 906 §

25 <sup>7</sup> The expressly specified statutory criteria in Proposition 65 settlements are: (1) the adequacy of 26 the Prop 65 warnings; (2) the reasonableness of the attorneys’ fees; and (3) the reasonableness of the penalty amount. Id. at 62.

27 <sup>8</sup> Google does not necessarily agree that, in practice, PAGA actions—or this PAGA action in 28 particular—advance the public policies described herein. However, it agrees with Plaintiff that the settlement should be approved.

1 1(a). The Legislature further found that, while self-policing efforts have had some success, “in 2 other cases the only meaningful deterrent to unlawful conduct is the vigorous assessment and 3 collection of civil penalties as provided in the Labor Code.” Id. at § 1(b). Through PAGA, the 4 Legislature thus: (1) sought to “enlist[] willing citizens in the task of private enforcement,” 5 Iskanian, 59 Cal.4th at 390; (2) “deputized” aggrieved employees to sue on behalf of the State to 6 enforce state labor laws; and (3) authorized them to recover civil penalties, attorneys’ fees, and 7 costs. 2003 Cal. Legis Serv. Ch. 906 (Legislative Counsel’s Digest). In bringing a PAGA action, 8 “[t]he employee-plaintiff acts as the proxy or agent of the state labor enforcement agencies, 9 representing the same legal right and interest as those agencies . . . .” Iskanian, 59 Cal.4th at 394.

10 As for the interests of the LWDA (in whose shoes Plaintiffs stand), its top enforcement 11 priorities are “to vigorously enforce minimum labor standards in order to ensure employers are 12 not required or permitted to work under substandard unlawful conditions . . . .” and to “protect 13 employers who comply with the law from those who attempt to gain a competitive advantage at 14 the expense of their workers by failing to comply with minimum labor standards.” Labor Code 15 §90.5(a). Moreover, in addition to the collection of civil penalties,<sup>9</sup> Labor Code § 1194.5 (which 16 is specifically referenced in Labor Code § 90.5) authorizes the LWDA to seek injunctive relief.

17 ***

18 In light of the above law, as well as the policies and purposes of PAGA, Plaintiffs propose 19 (and for purposes of this motion Google does not contest) that the Court consider the following 20 factors in determining whether to approve the settlement:

- 21 (1) The extent to which the settlement achieves compliance with state labor laws.
- 22 (2) The extent to which the settlement deters violations of the state labor laws.
- 23 (3) Whether the settlement serves to enlist private citizens in public enforcement of 24 PAGA.
- 25 (4) Whether the settlement is otherwise “just” and “in the public interest.”

26 _____
27 <sup>9</sup> Note that, under PAGA, civil penalties are primarily intended as a deterrent, and not as a 28 financing mechanism for the LWDA and the State’s general fund. While the State clearly has an interest “in receiving the proceeds of civil penalties,” the penalties are “used to deter violations.” Iskanian, 59 Cal.4th at 313.

1           Because the proposed settlement reasonably and fairly advances each of the above factors, 2 the parties ask that it be approved.

3           B. The Settlement Should Be Approved

4           1.       Although the Parties Dispute Whether Any Violations Have 5                   Occurred, the Settlement Achieves Compliance With, and Deters 6                   Violations of, State Labor Laws

7           As described above, in connection with its efforts to “cure” any alleged violation of Labor 8 Code section 232.5, Google rescinded the Release and instituted a new, non-confidential, policy 9 concerning the presence of “adult content” in the workplace. Therefore, while the parties dispute 10 whether the Liability Release violated the law, as well as whether the alleged Labor Code § 232.5 11 violation was adequately “cured” as part of PAGA’s administrative exhaustion process, the 12 litigation has undisputedly achieved compliance with Labor Code § 232.5 and 432.5 as it relates 13 to the Liability Release. In addition, Google has agreed to pay a substantial sum in settlement of 14 the Liability Release PAGA claims. Accordingly, the proposed settlement reasonably advances 15 PAGA’s purpose by achieving compliance with the Labor Code and deterring similar violations.

16           2.       The Settlement Serves to Enlist Private Citizens in Public 17                   Enforcement of PAGA

18           Plaintiffs also believe the proposed settlement acts to encourage private enforcement of 19 PAGA. Through the settlement, Plaintiffs may receive a modest incentive payment, Plaintiffs’ 20 counsel will receive attorneys’ fees and costs as determined by the Court, and all aggrieved 21 employees will receive a 25% share of the net settlement amount, as well as notice of the claim.

22           3.       The Settlement Is “Just” and “In the Public Interest”

23           Finally, the proposed settlement is both just and in the public’s interest.

24           First, the settlement reasonably values the Liability Release PAGA claims as to Google.
25 While Plaintiffs believe the claims are meritorious and that they would have recovered unreduced 26 penalties, as described above Google asserted numerous defenses to the claims. Moreover, as 27 noted above, the Court dismissed Plaintiffs’ claims under Labor Code § 232.5 as to the Liability 28 Release on preemption grounds, and the Court rejected Plaintiffs’ “continuous accrual” argument

1 under Labor Code § 432.5, noting that “Correa executed . . . the releases once.” (9.05.17 Order at 2 p. 4).

3 In addition, PAGA awards penalties of “one hundred dollars ($100) for each aggrieved 4 employee per pay period for the initial violation and two hundred dollars ($200) for each 5 aggrieved employee per pay period for each subsequent violation.” Labor Code § 2699(f)(2). At 6 least one appellate court holds, in the context of other Labor Code violations, that the 7 “subsequent” violation penalty rate for a Labor Code violation does not apply until an employer is 8 notified that its conduct violates the law. Amaral v. Cintas Corp. No. 2 (2008) 163 Cal.App.4th 9 1157, 1207-09.<sup>10</sup>

10 In light of the above law and rulings, Google has good arguments that its maximum 11 liability for requiring employees to sign the Liability Release is $100 per signature.

12 Nevertheless, Google has agreed to pay a gross amount of $1,048,843.00 in exchange for 13 a PAGA release involving approximately 10,603 aggrieved employees who signed the Liability 14 Release in the applicable time frame. In other words, Google is paying almost $99.00 per 15 violation against an arguable maximum recovery against Google – based on this Court’s rulings 16 and Amaral -- of $100 per violation. (In addition, both Google and Adecco also strongly dispute 17 that the Liability Release violates Labor Code § 432.5 in the first place.) If the Court grants 18 Plaintiffs’ application for fees, costs and incentive payments, the State and the aggrieved 19 employees will still share approximately $65 per violation in civil penalties – still a significant 20 and reasonable recovery.<sup>11</sup>

21 <sup>10</sup> Plaintiffs disagree with the Court’s Garmon preemption analysis. Plaintiffs also disagree with 22 the Court’s finding as to the applicable limitations period under § 432.5, as well as whether the 23 same logic applies to employees who signed the Release within the applicable period and 24 remained subject to the release throughout and after their employment. Plaintiff also believes 25 that Amaral does not apply to the present case and can otherwise be distinguished.
26 Nevertheless, the above rulings materially impact the litigation value of the Liability Release claims. While Plaintiffs firmly believe (and Google disputes) that the Court’s rulings will be reversed, this could easily take years, during which time the State, absent settlement, receives nothing.

27 <sup>11</sup> It is appropriate to consider the gross award (before deductions) in comparing the litigation 28 value of a case against a settlement award. Among other things, it is appropriate to pay fees out of a common fund, even in a fee-shifting case, “to avoid the unjust enrichment of those who

1 In light of the above, the settlement reasonably values the Liability Release claims.

2 Second, the settlement expressly excludes from its scope both Adecco and other staffing 3 firms that assign employees to work at Google. Therefore, the release is tailored to the claims 4 asserted against Google.<sup>12</sup>

5 Third, the proposed settlement, even with deductions, provides a substantial sum to the 6 State: $488,793.00. It also provides a small sum to each employee (around $15.00) on a pro-rata 7 basis. (The aggregate sum provided to employees (assuming all deductions) is $162,931.603.) 8 However, the purpose of PAGA is not to compensate employees, who retain any private right of 9 action they may have under the applicable Labor Code provisions. In that respect, the settlement 10 also requires that each employee receive a notice that describes this litigation and the settlement 11 sum. Plaintiffs contend this notice will educate aggrieved employees as to the requirements of 12 the Labor Code, something that is in the public interest and consistent with PAGA’s purpose. See 13 Labor Code § 2699(j) (stating that civil penalties recovered under PAGA shall be distributed to 14 the LWDA for [among other things] “education of employers and employees about their rights 15 and responsibilities under this code.”)

16 Fourth, public policy strongly favors the settlement of litigation. Consumer Advocacy 17 Group v. Kintetsu, supra, 141 Cal.App.4th at 63. Because the proposed settlement is neither 18 unjust nor ignores the public interest, it should be approved. Id.

19 C. Payment of Attorneys’ Fees, Costs, and Incentive Payments

20 Finally, the settlement requires that attorney fees, costs, and incentive payments be paid 21 from the common fund. This is appropriate, even in the non-class action context. “California has 22 long recognized, as an exception to the general American rule that parties bear the costs of their 23 own attorneys, the proprietary of awarding an attorney fee to a party who has recovered or

24 _____
25 benefit from the fund that is created, protected, or increased by litigation and who otherwise 26 bear none of the litigation costs.” Sobel v. Hertz Corporation (D. Nev. 2014) 53 F.Supp.3d 1319, 1326.

27 <sup>12</sup> Plaintiffs understand that Adecco argues the proposed settlement bars the State’s and Correa’s 28 claims against Adecco as it relates to the Liability Release. Correa disagrees. Google and Plaintiffs’ intent, as evidenced by the plain language of the Settlement Agreement, is to not effectuate a release of claims as to Adecco.

1 preserved a monetary fund for the benefit of himself or herself and others. In awarding a fee from 2 the fund or from the other benefited parties, the trial court acts within its equitable power to 3 prevent the other parties' unjust enrichment." Laffitte v. Robert Half Intern, Inc. (2016) 1 Cal.5th 4 480, 561 (approving percentage of recovery method in wage and hour class action); Sobel, 53 5 F.Supp.3d at 1330 (approving Plaintiff's right to seek fees from common fund in fee shifting 6 case); Fox v. Hale & Norcross Silver Min. Co. (1895) 108 Cal. 475 (approving fee payment from 7 common fund in early derivative case).

8 Plaintiffs have filed a contemporaneous fee motion that further explains the proprietary of 9 Plaintiffs' request for fees, costs, and incentive payments from the common fund. That said, the 10 proposed settlement is not contingent upon any particular fee, incentive payment, or cost award 11 (other than with respect to the settlement administrator's costs), and should not serve as a basis 12 for rejecting the proposed settlement.<sup>13</sup>

13 V. CONCLUSION

14 For all the reasons discussed above, the parties request that the Court approve the 15 proposed settlement, approve the proposed notice, and adopt the Order and schedule attached to 16 this motion.
